

Day 1 onboarding

UI bugs:

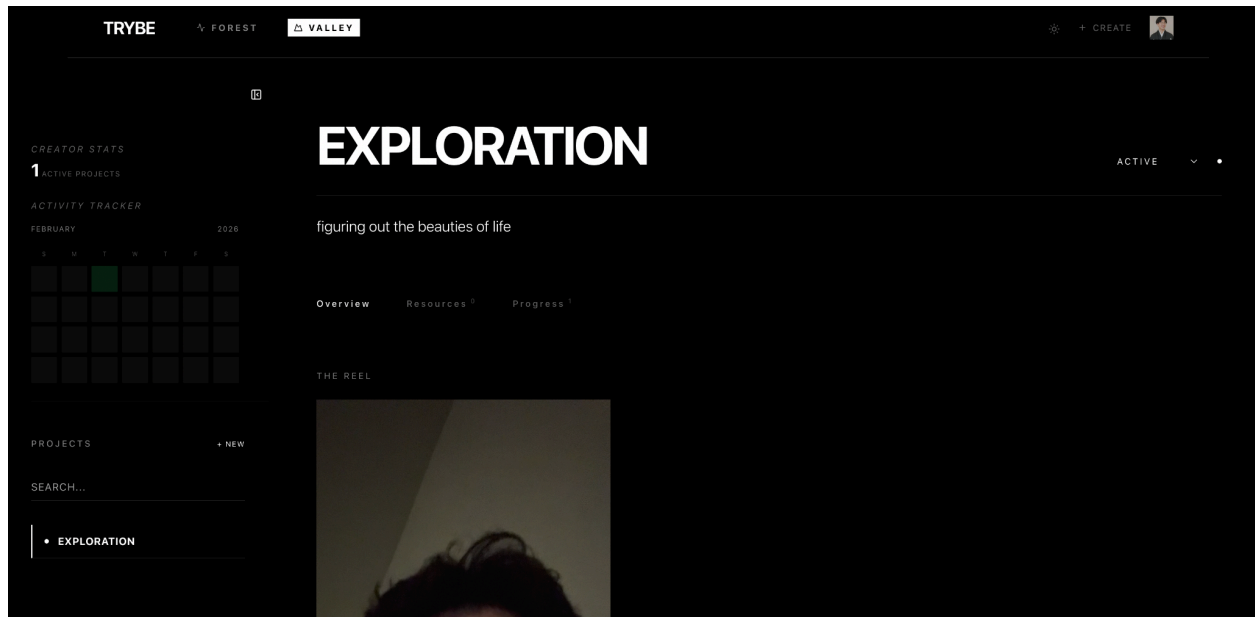

Thoughts on the flow, after this point, seems intuitive enough, I like that you have to record something, seems like a good accountability partner.

The map(forest) view is quite interesting, I wonder how it works as the platform scales? Will you have different maps by interest category? How do you do the segmentation for that and what algorithm will you use?

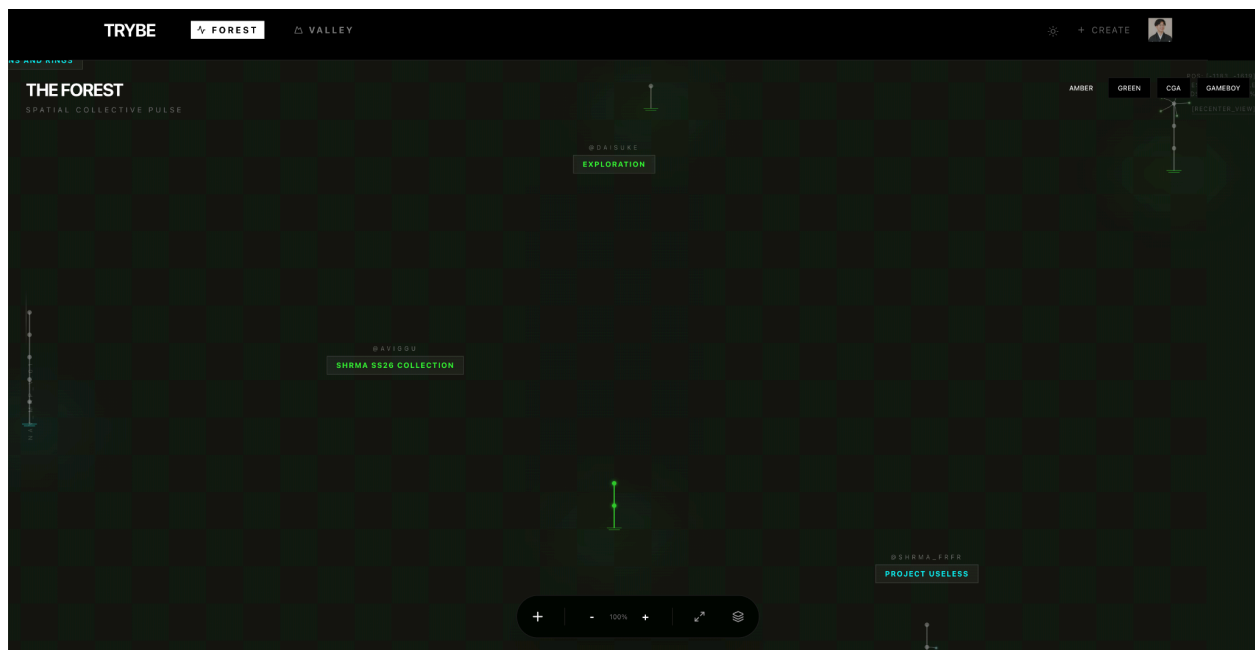

Overall navigation wise, the platform is very clean. I was a bit confused when I was first taken to the forest page, but once I switched back and forth between forest and valley I started to get the hang of it.

Also once im in my personal project page within the valley, i am unsure of how to get back to the general valley page to see other people's work.

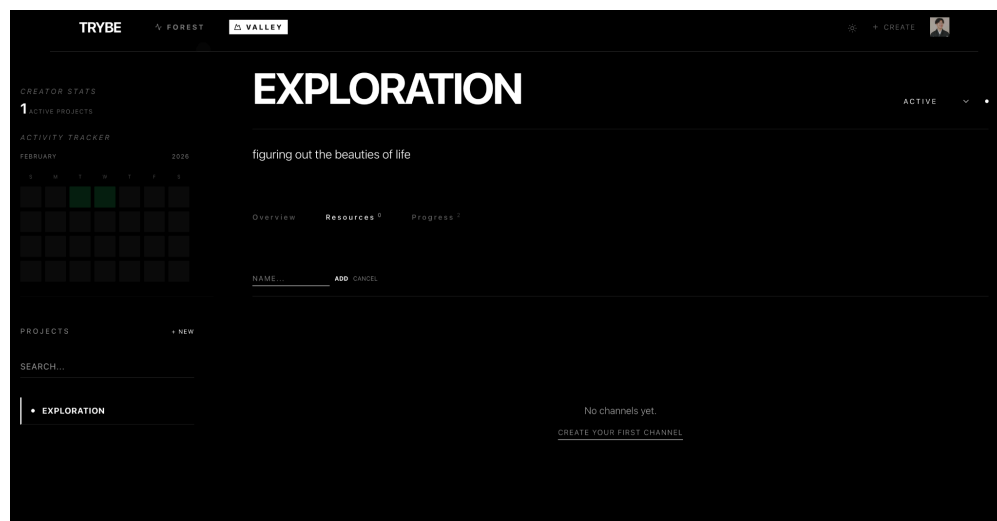

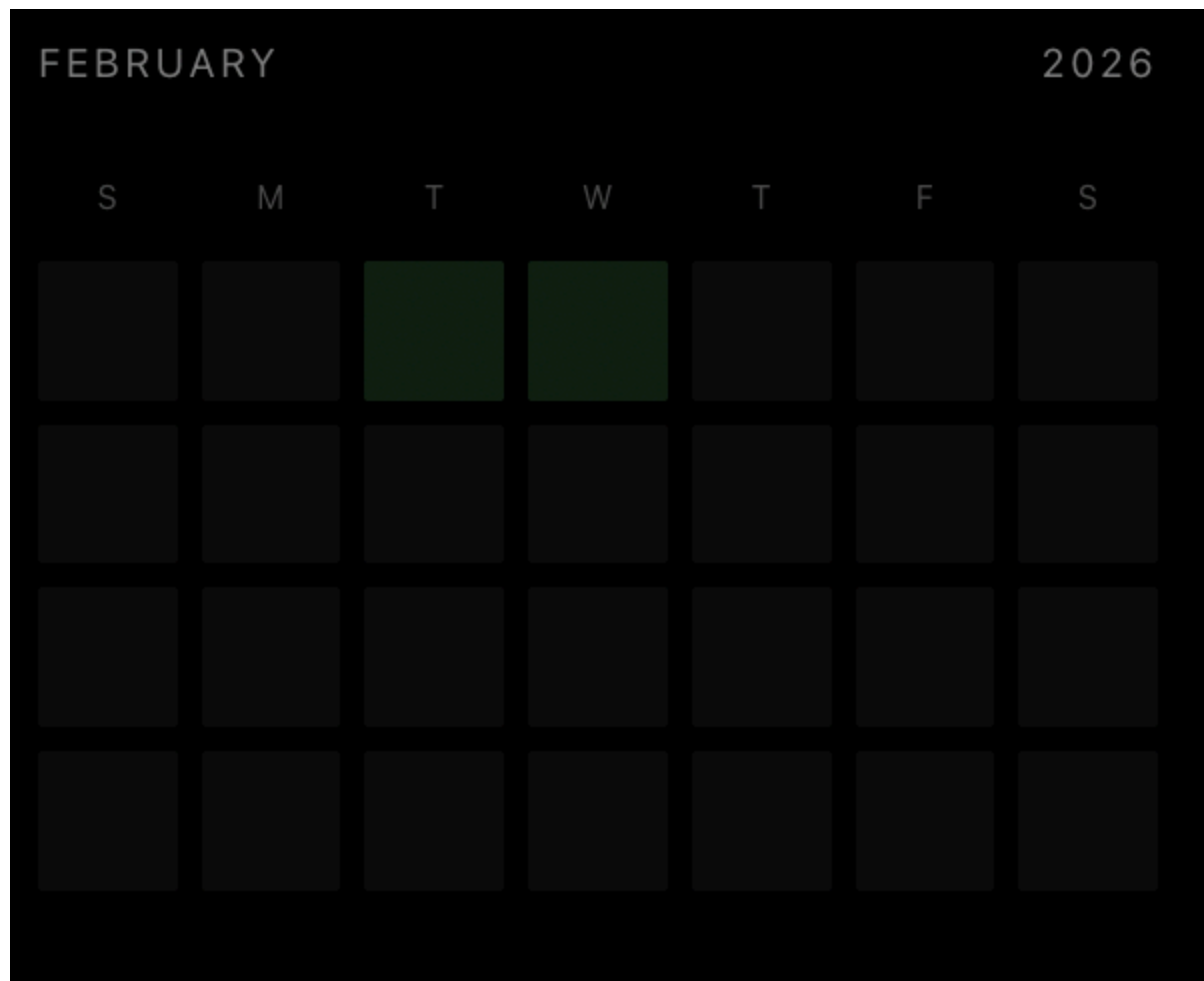

Day 2 Starting the streak:

After uploading the game, not too sure how to access the channels. Not really sure where to go from this view

Also unsure of any visual cues that tell me i actually have a 2 day streak now? I guess this is my signal?

Okay clicked around and found channels but might need to add some more self-serve aspects to the onboarding with more tool-tips and tours on the first few days. To navigate around.

Uploads worked fine, seems like the progress videos now become its own “channel”
